Welcome! Discover Hidden Treasure Towns And Sites Of The Adriatic Area With Us

Are you small or medium enterprise, supplier of tourist services, policy-maker on a local or regional level, tourist blogger or influencer? If yes, join us on a journey of discovering hidden treasure towns and sites of the Adriatic Area. We are 13 partners from Italy and Croatia gathered around project Excover. We’ll be mapping the potentials, developing capacities and including local population in building innovative solutions and tourist products, improving the tourism supply chain, and trying to contribute to better territorial and seasonal distribution of tourist flows in Croatia and Italy.
Creation of Competitive Cross-Border Tourist Products Through the Participatory Planning and Common Goals

The premise of creating a quality tourist product within the Excover project is based on the active involvement of the local population in the process of identifying and promoting locations on the outskirts of the main tourist routes.

Active involvement of local population
Because of that, all project partners from Italy-Croatia Interreg programme area will start participatory planning that will give a voice to the residents of those areas and enable them to get involved in the project on two levels - through offering to the tourists the experiences of those locations through their eyes and through collecting information about the availability of accommodation facilities and services, that will serve as a supplement to newly created tourist products. This way, locals will get the chance to offer existing, but underused capacities, knowledge, facilities and other resources, using the opportunities provided by the tools of the sharing economy.

Methodology of the process of actively involving the local population for the needs of Excover project was developed by experts from the University of Udine, partner in the project, and using this methodology, identification of tourist resources in all project areas will be carried out.

From fresh ideas to new products
Participation in the project is not mandatory, but it is desirable. All the stakeholders from tourism sector can get involved in the participatory planning, and everyone that can offer their knowledge and skills on the tourism market is certainly welcome. For effective results, it is crucial that process involves different groups of individuals and organisations. Also, it is important to include young people with fresh ideas and views on tourism, as well as use the "snowball" technique - involving individuals who are able to evoke interest and engage others, using available creative tools and platforms.

Through the project, a database will be created as a foundation for all future marketing efforts, and it will cover segments from cultural heritage (historical centres, monuments, events, theatres, local markets, festivals...), natural resources (parks, nature paths, lakes, mountains, caves, rivers, thermal springs, farms...), hidden heritage (tangible and intangible) and various experiences (cooking classes, art workshops, picking herbs...).

Join us and contribute
Due to pandemic, interview activities and focus groups were suspended, and because those are the main tools of participatory planning within the project, they will continue as soon as conditions allow. So, if you want to contribute, let us know, share your experiences through interaction with our experts and with other people. Let's discover hidden treasures together and show tourists everything that can attract them to stay (at least one) day longer in Excover area.

Project Excover Goes Online due to the Pandemic of Coronavirus

Excover partners adapted to the pandemic and are continuing to work. Because of that, they arranged series of online meetings through which they will continue the scheduled project activities.

Presentation of research results
The topic of first such meeting was WP3 - SWOT and reputation analysis that most of the partners conducted just before the lockdown measures in Italy and Croatia. This online meeting was mainly used for presenting the research results that gave a good insight into the perception of tourism and willingness for participation in sharing economy throughout the Excover project area.

Great interest in use of sharing economy
Annalisa Stacchini, from University of Bologna compiled the data received from all partners, and presented the first, provisional results of the research. Overall results showed that residents from considered areas are highly interested in participating in the tourist offer, while people with different cultures are welcomed by the local community. Also, there is a big potential for sharing economy, mainly because Excover area have many accommodations available to be shared. Lastly, in spite of rich cultural and natural resources in all considered areas, there is still a need to come up with more attractions, and to work further on marketing of the existing potentials.

Besides that, researches have also showed the other side of tourist point of view, from those who haven’t yet visited considered areas, and they noted that the most desired destination attributes are nature, prices and security. Luckily, exactly those attributes are what makes the backbone of the tourist offer in the Excover area.

Reaching the Public with the Series of Informal Online World Cafés
Modern tools will help carry out important activities within Excover project, so in the next few months four online World Cafés will be organised. Topics of these chat-based Cafés will be related to tourism, culture, involvement of the people, use of digital tools, mapping the heritage of specific areas, collecting data for development of tourism products and the ways of utilizing coronavirus free areas in attracting the tourists.

Informal conferences, which will be available to everyone because of their online format on Zoom platform and will be hosted by Excover project expert, Gilberto Zangari. Interestingly, these World Cafés are produced entirely on a volunteer basis and are open to whoever wishes to participate, and they are not limited to the Excover project partners.

Really everyone can apply easily with the links and QR codes on projects website and social media, and invite others so they can all share their thoughts and ideas from home or office. First Excover World Café was held on June 24th, and the topic was "Participatory mapping of heritage to identify potential tourist attractions". The topic "Inland and unknown areas becoming coronavirus free tourist destinations" will be handled on July 8th, after which the participants will discuss "How to use innovative digital tools to involve actively citizens and tourists in the collection of information" on July 22. Lastly, on 9th of September, Excover World Café will end with the important topic: "Content Management System (CMS) as dynamic database for storage of data collected during a tourism product development process."
